

The New Police Commissioners.

Chicago Tribune (1860-1872); Mar 27, 1861;

ProQuest Historical Newspapers: Chicago Tribune (1849-1990)

pg. 0_1

The New Police Commissioners.

The new Police Commissioners, upon whom the sudden and total extinction of the old city police force, yesterday, as noticed elsewhere, has precipitated a sudden and imperative demand for action, were in session throughout a greater share of the day and evening at the Supervisors' room. Nothing however had transpired up to a late hour last evening as to the result of their action in their appointments. Probably in a day or two matters in this department of our city affairs will be again in train. It only requires wisdom in selection, since an abundance of material lies ready to their hands, both for officers and policemen. Nothing but merit should be the rule in their selections.

Reproduced with permission of the copyright owner. Further reproduction prohibited without permission.