

WILSON EYEING OLD STATIONS OF PARK POLICE

Being Considered for Intelligence Unit

Stations of old park district police and space their leaders occupied in the park district administration building may be used by Police Supt. Orlando W. Wilson's new bureau of intelligent services.

After a three hour meeting Tuesday night at the detective bureau with his top aids, Wilson said that the city would try to take over the old stations or rent space in them.

Want Better Quarters

Use of the city's old Canal-Port station, which once housed the Scotland Yard unit, is not possible, the city's new police superintendent said.

"We want better quarters for the intelligence unit under Capt. Morris," said Wilson. He announced on Monday the appointment of Capt. Joseph Morris, who for many years headed the Scotland Yard detail, as head of the bureau of intelligence services.

The park district stations, most of which have been abandoned since the park police was merged with city police 15 months ago, are in Washington park, Garfield park, Lincoln park, and at Soldiers' field. The central office of the park police was in the administration building in Burnham park.

"Things Must Jell"

Wilson's meeting with his aids was the longest he has held since he took office March 4. He also said after the meeting that:

1. "Things will have to jell," and there will be no promotions or transfers for some time.
2. Uniformed policemen will wear short-sleeve shirts with soft collars next summer, but ties will be worn "in the cool of the evening."
3. Three wheel motorcycles "will be with us a while, until we get money to buy cars to take their place."

Keeps Daley Informed

Meeting with Wilson were Deputy Superintendents Albert Anderson and Kyran Phelan; Capt. James Hackett, chief of the uniformed force; Capt. Philip McGuire, chief of traffic; James McMahan, chief of detectives; Capt. Morris, and two consultants hired by Wilson—Col. Minor Wilson and Thomas Rogers.

Wilson said he has kept Mayor Daley informed of each change he has planned for the department, and that Daley had shown no desire to interfere. He said he feels that Daley meant it when he said that police operations are entirely in the hands of the superintendent.

Complete Lie Tests

Wilson said that Col. Wilson would have charge of evaluating lie tests given more than 200 policemen since the police-burglary scandal was touched off two months ago in the Summerdale district.

After three tests were administered Tuesday at the Hilton hotel, Prof. Fred J. Inbau of the Northwestern university law school, who has directed the tests, said the testing is completed for now, but that the tests might be resumed later.

Morris Picks Staff

Capt. Morris spent several hours Tuesday interviewing police captains and lieutenants in his new offices on the fourth floor of police headquarters, 1121 S. State st.

Capt. Morris said he was selecting his staff, and that he would make suggestions to Wilson, who would announce the appointments.
